

CARRIE NATION 2ND

MRS. DROLLINGER USES THE FAMOUS "BOOZE" SMASHER'S TACTICS.

She Used A Pick

She Slightly Interrupted Her Husband's Party by Demolishing Several Cases of Beer With a Workman's Implement.

It has been nearly 20 years ago since Carrie Nation broke into the limelight and startled the world by her repeated raids on liquor and gambling joints, but now Argentine district boasts of having a real live Carrie II.

Tuesday morning Harry Drollinger of 1534 South Twenty-fifth street, who manages a stone quarry on "the hill," ordered several cases of beer to be brought to the stone quarry, where he and his men might have a "cold" bottle when thirsty. Evidently their thirst was greater than their hunger, because Harry failed to show up to his dinner which his wife, Bertha, had prepared at their home.

About 2 o'clock Mrs. Drollinger dispatched a neighbor boy to the quarry to ascertain the cause of her husband's delay. The young man found the men all sitting around the "cases" and evidently enjoying every minute.

Never hesitating to don her wraps, Mrs. Drollinger made her way to the hill, after satisfying herself that her husband was mixed up in the affair. She quietly picked up a pick and used the regular Carrie Nation idea in smashing the beer, and as one of the men said, "The air was full of flying glass."

After reading the "law" to the members of the party she left them to "ponder over the situation."

No more beer parties have been held on the hill since.
